

Col. Robert McCausland and the County Derry McCauslands

Col. Robert McCausland appears to be the first (and perhaps only) McCausland from County Tyrone to have established residence in County Derry. He is reputed to have inherited lands from his wife's uncle, the Rt. Hon William Conolly who had much property in the vicinity of Limavady. Many of Col. Robert's descendants have retained Conolly as a given name.

Burke's identifies three primary male branches of Col. Robert McCausland Conolly, Marcus and Frederick. There is some evidence that he may have had other sons, in particular that the "Maine McCauslands" may be descended from a son of Col. Robert. The three identified sons are associated with three distinct locations nearby Limavady: Conolly with Fruit Hill (now Drenagh), Marcus with Daisy Hill and Frederick with Streeve Hill. As Col. Robert McCausland was "of Fruit Hill", his eldest son, Conolly, apparently inherited this property. Fruit Hill was changed to Drenagh in the late 1800's and descendants still live there today. Frederick McCausland's son, Conolly, built a house at Streeve Hill which still stands today as a hotel/B&B. The information in Burke's has been provided over the years by the Limavady/Drenagh descendants of Col. Robert's son, Conolly.

There appears to have been little further connection between the County Derry (Limavady) McCauslands and the original branch in County Tyrone. Many of the County Derry McCauslands subsequently left for England or service in India. Outside of the possibility that the Maine McCauslands were descended from a son of Col. Robert McCausland, none appear to have emigrated to America.

There is no reference in Burke's that John Kennedy had a daughter named Maria. However, the 1958 edition does mention that he had an unnamed daughter who married Marcus Langford McCausland. In John Kennedy's 1801 codicil to his will he mentions "...my daughter Maria's father-in-law, Dominick McCausland...". Various references in Hodson's "Officers of the Bengal Army" to the McCauslands and Kennedys make it clear that Maria Kennedy was the mother of Lt. Gen. John Kennedy McCausland. Therefore, information in the McCausland entry in the 1971 Burke's "Landed Gentry of Ireland" stating that Marcus Langford McCausland's wife was "Elizabeth, yr dau of George Crookshank Kennedy-Skipton" certainly appears to be incorrect.

He had one son, John, by Ann McQuire, but there is no evidence that they were ever married. His wife, Emma Faithfull, was the daughter of another career military officer in India, Colonel William Conrad Faithfull. No marriage record of John Kennedy McCausland and Emma Faithfull has been found in India. It is possible that they returned to England to marry.
